Margrit! Imaginary monologues. Not shown to anyone.
This is my friend, Jenny Grundbaum. She's a gardener too. We've just been to visit Jan Gubler's garden at the Fox Hill Inn and Jenny agrees with me that it is absolutely superb, that everyone ~~must~~ should see it. Jan's giving a party tonight to show off her night-blooming cereus plant. We hope that you will come.

See above: Imaginary monologue

12 "Jochen! This is my friend, Jerry Grundbaum.
He has a lot of interests in common with you. He has been teaching philosophy at ~~the~~ Michigan State University, and he is working on a book about modern philosophy.
He also dabbles in architecture and built his own cabin by Lake Michigan with a composting toilet. ~~Also~~ he wonders what you would say about the spot he's been seeing ever since he fell off a ladder last week. He's worried because his father went blind quite suddenly 5 yrs before he died.

[my comment on re-reading this page: It is obviously an imitation of Margrit's conversational efforts.]
